SPECIALIST MANICURE AND PEDICURE

In the professional skincare market, products used for the care and beauty of the hands and feet are all the more in demand. With many similarities and some differences, the hands and feet are areas of the body which require a particular type of care and attention.

On the one side we have the hands that are constantly visible and more exposed to external aggressions, whereas the feet are at risk of being neglected due to the fact that they are always "hidden" inside shoes, being susceptible to conditions such as callosity and fungal infections.

From the [ comfort zone ] research laboratories, a new professional line has been conceived for the care of the hands and feet. The union of the technical formulation approach with a professional ritualistic treatment offers the perfect wellbeing, relaxing experience for the guest.

HANDS

The hands are constantly on display and affected by our daily habits, especially frequent handwashing, which compromises their integrity, softness and smoothness.

The structural difference between the skin on the palms and the back of the hands determines the primary technical complexity in developing a product that is both hydrating and protective. The epidermis of the palm (the same as that of the sole of the foot) is characterized by the presence of an extra layer of skin, the stratum lucidum, found between the stratum granulosum and the stratum corneum. This layer is composed of keratinocytes which do not have a nucleus and adhere to each other strongly, therefore providing more resistance to areas which are constantly under stress due to various stimuli (chemical, physical and mechanical). The absence of sebaceous glands and hair follicles, normally present on the backs of the hands and all over the skin in general, is compensated by a notable density of sweat glands and nerve receptors, very specific for these areas. On the other side, the skin structure on the back of the hands is more fine, even within the dermis and hypodermis, which means that skin protection, hydration, and elasticity are at risk, leaving the hands prone to being vulnerable and sensitive to the daily external demands.

The structure and richness of the creams must take into consideration the fact that the product comes into contact with two areas which are very different, yet bringing benefits to both.

NAILS

Nails are derivatives of the stratum corneum and are hard, rectangular, convex and translucent structures with a thickness of 0,5 - 0,75 mm, and found on the superficial dorsal part of the distal phalanges of the fingers and toes. They cover an area of the epidermis, called the nail bed, which appears rosy pink in color due to its rich vascular activity.

The nails are composed mainly of water and keratin, a protein made up of amino acids, primarily sulphured (cystein and methionine) which render the nail highly resistant; mineral salts (iron, zinc, copper) and some other vitamins (B6, A, C, H). This composition provides both elasticity and resistance, indispensable characteristics for a structure which is constantly in demand.

FEET

The structure of the skin on the soles of the feet, as already indicated for the palms of the hands, is characterized by much more thickness in comparison to the rest of the body. The epidermis is actually composed of an additional layer, called the stratum lucidum, present only on the soles of the feet and the palms of the hands. Like the palms, the soles do not have hair follicles or sebaceous glands. Despite their important role in supporting the body, the feet often tend to be neglected, because they are enclosed in shoes and not seen. This can bring about problems such as excessive sweating and chronic traumas, which over time can bring about changes and imperfections, such as unpleasant odor, roughness, callosity and swelling. Some practical habits, combined with the use of specific cosmetic products, can help resolve these problems, bestowing a healthy, cared-for appearance to the feet.

ACTIVE INGREDIENTS

SACHA INCHI OIL, or Plukenetia Volubilis, also known as Sacha Peanut, is a highly effective ingredient to restructure and protect the skin, nails and hair, thanks to its hydrating and reinforcing action on the skin barrier. The Incas were the first to discover the properties of this rare plant and it was originally cultivated in the area of Picanauqui in the region of Junin. The fertile soil rich in minerals in the heart of Peru was particularly beneficial for the cultivation of Sacha Inchi. The plant grows at approximately 500 m above sea level at the foot of the Andes, but is surprisingly protected from the violent rains, floods and strong winds which characterize this area. Within the star-shaped fruits are the seeds, and together with the leaves, they both offer many different interesting uses for man. The dry leaves can be used to prepare herbal teas, whereas the seeds, can be toasted and eaten as a snack, or even ground to use in food. By cold-pressing the seeds a very distinct oil is obtained, rich in non-saturated fatty acids and with a high nutritional value with Omega 3 (more than 48%), Omega 6 (36%) and Omega 9 (8%), together with tocopherols, to guarantee the protection of the skin's elasticity and hydration.

NEEM, Azadirachta Indica, is a tree originating in India, also known as the Miracle Tree and considered the village pharmacy due to its many beneficial properties. Since ancient times, it was used in different ways: to combat viruses and bacteria, urinary disturbances, diarrhea, fever, skin maladies, burns and inflammation. In the cosmetic industry, the oil is used for its protective and antibacterial actions.

HOME CARE

The SPECIALIST homecare offer is composed of three fundamental products: a light-weight, non-oily hand cream that absorbs quickly, a foot balm with an intense nourishing action for even the most dry feet, and a precious vegetal oil blend for hands which are excessively dry, as well as for the protection and strengthening of the nails and softening of the cuticles.

PROFESSIONAL

The professional offer is composed of products for all steps of the manicure and pedicure: a cleansing milk and scrub for hands and feet; a rinse-off mask and cream for the hands; and for the feet a peel to be used on specific areas of thickness, and a foot balm.

OLFACTORY NOTE

The aroma reveals a floral heart inspired by clean notes of white tea and jasmine that are lightly awakened by citrusy notes of lemon and bergamot, combined with tea leaves. The result is an embracing synergy that recalls the sensation of protection and care.

BEAUTY TIP

When hands are exceptionally dry, it is advised to avoid frequent handwashing, choose delicate detergents without sulphates and to avoid very hot water. It is also essential to dry hands after washing them, because water left on the skin will naturally evaporate, taking with it the molecules of water needed for hydration, leaving the skin chronically dehydrated and dry.

HOW IT WORKS

SACHA INCHI OIL is an oil extracted from a plant found in the Peruvian Amazon rainforests, where it has been cultivated by the indigenous people for centuries. Traditionally it was used by the local women as a beauty product; mixing it with flour they were able to obtain a cream to preserve softness and luminosity. The oil, rich in Omega 3 and 6 essential fatty acids, promotes a restructuring action of the skin barrier. These molecules are able to insert themselves into the interstitial spaces of the cells, reducing the loss of water and promoting a hydrating, protective action.

PANTHENOL is an ingredient, which thanks to an identical mechanism, guarantees the integrity of the skin barrier. As a precursor of Vitamin B5, it supports the physiological process of tissue renewal, and due to its hydrophilic structure, holds water within the skin's layers, preserving the correct level of hydration.

GLOSSARY

CALLOSITY

A thickened and hardened part of the skin, called a callus, as a result of repeated contact or friction. Very common on the heels of the foot, balls of the foot and the toes, due to excessive walking or poorly fitting footwear.

KERATIN

A protein made up of amino acids (especially cysteine and methionine), mineral salts (iron, zinc, copper) and some other vitamins (B6, A, C, H). This composition provides both elasticity and resistance, indispensable characteristics for a structure which is constantly in demand.

NEEM EXTRACT

An ingredient obtained from the leaves of the Azadirachta Indica tree, with its origins in India and Burma. Also known as the Miracle Tree and referred to as the village pharmacy due to its numerous curative properties. In India, this extract, along with the leaves and twigs of the plant, are considered a true medical kit and as a remedy for virtually any complaint or ailment. The extract is traditionally known for its antibacterial, antiseptic and anti-fungal properties, and therefore ideal for the hygiene and care of the feet, as well as hands.

PANTHENOL

The provitamin of Vitamin B5, has moisturizing and emollient functions thanks to its ability to penetrate the skin, also providing hydration.

SACHI INCHI OIL

An oil extracted from a plant found in the Peruvian Amazon rainforests, originally discovered by the Incas, and where it has been cultivated by the indigenous people for centuries. Its botanical name is Plukenetia Volubilis, and also known as Sacha Peanut. Traditionally it was used by the local women as a beauty product; mixing it with flour they were able to obtain a cream to preserve softness and luminosity. The dry leaves can be used to prepare herbal teas, whereas the seeds can be toasted and eaten as a snack, or even ground to use in food. The cold-pressed oil, rich in Omega 3 and 6 essential fatty acids, promotes a restructuring action of the skin barrier. These molecules are able to insert themselves into the interstitial spaces of the cells, reducing the loss of water and promoting a hydrating, protective action.

SHEA BUTTER

Thanks to its extraordinary softening and hydrating actions, is considered a butter which protects the youth of the skin. Rich in Vitamin E, it offers protection against free radicals.

STRATUM LUCIDUM

An additional layer of the epidermis found only in the skin of the palms of the hands and soles of the feet, located between the stratum granulosum and the stratum corneum. This layer is composed of keratinocytes which do not have a nucleus and adhere to each other strongly, therefore providing more resistance to areas which are constantly under stress due to various stimuli (chemical, physical and mechanical). The absence of sebaceous glands and hair follicles, normally present on the backs of the hands and all over the skin in general, is compensated by a notable density of sweat glands and nerve receptors, very specific for these areas.

SWEET ALMOND OIL

Emollient and nourishing. Rich in fatty acids, it helps to thoroughly hydrate even the most dry and dehydrated skin, restoring softness and elasticity.

TAMANU OIL

A precious organic oil from Polynesia that is considered a natural antibiotic and is indicated for all skin problems. Traditionally, the oil is used to treat and heal wounds of different kinds. Thanks to its antioxidant properties, it is also used to protect the skin's elasticity.

SPECIALIST EPILATION

Hair is produced by a specialized organ, the hair follicle, a structure consisting of an introflexion of the skin, the follicle or bulb, up to 5-6 mm deep and from a sebaceous gland. The visible part of the hair is a long thin cylinder of dead cells.

The activity of the follicles is not continuous and homogeneous throughout the life of the individual and differs from ethnic groups, from one person to the next, and especially from man to woman.

Before puberty, most of the body is covered with a thin, unpigmented hair called vellus. The male hormones, called androgens, also contribute to promoting the conversion of the vellus hair into thicker and pigmented hairs, called terminal hairs.

The hairs therefore grow in relation to the rate of androgen production and follow a distinct cycle in three phases: anagen, catagen, telogen.

During the growth stage, which is called anagen, the germinal cells in the bulb proliferate to form a new hair. The length of the hair depends on the duration of this phase. Catagen is the regression phase, during which the hair stops growing and detaches from the bulb and is followed by a period of rest called the telogen stage in which the hair is detached from the follicle, pushed out by the new hair coming through.

Waxing is an epilatory method whose efficacy can be calibrated according to the type of removal you want to achieve. Consistency and the use of specific ingredients can therefore vary depending on whether removal is on thinner hair or on thicker resistant hair. The hair growth cycle, being intimately connected to the hormonal activity, differs from individual to individual but with a defined variability of time ranging from 20 to 30 days.

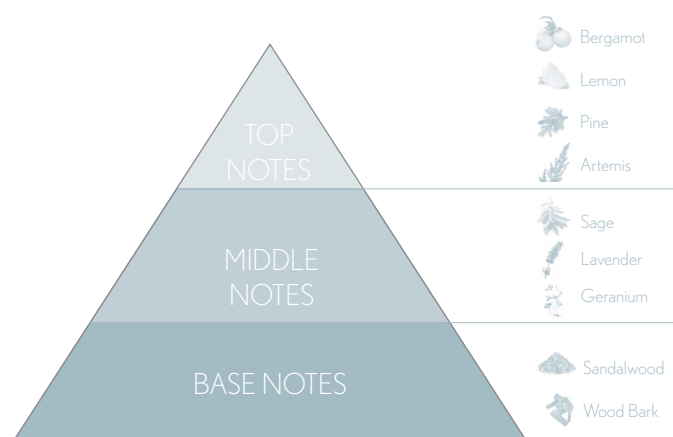

The awareness of this recurring cycle allows one to ascertain how often epilatory treatments should be carried out to favor a more lasting action.
